

TOWNSHIP OF LITTLE EGG HARBOR ZONING BOARD OF ADJUSTMENT

665 Radio Road, Little Egg Harbor, New Jersey 08087
Telephone No.: 609-296-7241 ext. 221 / Fax No.: 609-294-3040

INSTRUCTIONS

Once you complete the Application & Appeal Form please follow these directions in order to commence your appeal:

1. Return the completed Application and Appeal form together with fourteen (14) copies to the:

Little Egg Harbor Township
Attn. Zoning Board Secretary
665 Radio Road
Little Egg Harbor Township, NJ 08087

2. The following fees are required with each application, unless otherwise noted:
 - a. Non-Refundable Application Fee - $100.00;
 - b. Resolution Preparation Fee - $150.00; and
 - c. Escrow Fee $500.00 (additional escrow may be required).

Please note that three (3) separate checks or money orders made payable to "Little Egg Harbor Township" are required. Please note the application fee is non-refundable in the event that you do not proceed with your application.

3. The Application will be sent to the board's engineer for review and determine if any additional information or escrow fees are required based on the request for relief set forth in the application. In accordance with Municipal Land Use Law, the engineer has 45 days from the date the Application is filed to deem an application complete or incomplete.

4. In order for your application to be considered by the Zoning Board of Adjustment all fees and information required by the board secretary and engineer must be received in the board secretary prior to the hearing. (A separate check or money order is required for fees and required escrows. Fees are non-refundable.)

5. It is very important to remember that municipal employees and representatives (such as the board engineer or attorney) cannot provide you legal advice or advise you which form of relief to seek from the Zoning Board of Adjustment.

Instructions for Application & Appeal Form

Do not submit these instructions with your application or appeal.
Maintain these with your records.

The Application & Appeal Form is a critical part of your application or appeal to the Zoning Board of Adjustment. Therefore, it is important for you to take care in completing your responses to each of the questions in the form.

Q. Should I hire an attorney?

A. Although it generally is not necessary for you to be represented by an attorney (unless, for example, you are a corporate applicant), you are strongly encouraged to consider hiring a competent land use attorney for purposes of guiding your application or appeal through the maze of procedural and substantive requirements of state law and local ordinances. A recurring complaint received from applicants whose requests for relief have been denied is that they were not familiar with the complex legal standards and burdens of proof when preparing for their hearing. Many applicants have left the hearing room disappointed and confused, feeling that an attorney could have made a difference.

Q. If I have a question, who do I contact?

A. Depending upon the nature of your question, we suggest that prior to filing an application or appeal you should contact and speak with the Zoning Officer. This may require scheduling an appointment. Once you file an application or appeal, however, most questions should be raised in writing to the Zoning Board of Adjustment engineer and not the Zoning Officer. If the engineer does not have an answer for you, s/he will assist you with finding an answer. You should not rely on the clerical staff for assistance or advice. Additionally, municipal employees or representatives cannot provide you with legal advice.

Q. Can I find out in advance of the hearing whether the Board will grant my application?

A. Each application stands on its own merits. Until the Board members hear and consider the evidence it is not proper for them to pre-judge the application or appeal. Essentially, the Board is a quasi-judicial body and should be respected as you would a court of law. You can expect that your application or appeal will be considered fairly, but you should not expect that the result will be the same as in a similar case. No two zoning cases are exactly the same.

PART A: This section of the application form generally is self-explanatory. Information about your property may be available from a number of different sources. For example, the Tax Assessor's Office maintains property records which include information such as zoning district, known lot dimensions, known lot area data, and property tax assessments for land and improvements. You may already have important information in your possession such as the information contained on a survey, in the deed to the property, in the title insurance binder and policy, or on your tax bills. Lastly, you should confirm whatever written data and information you find with a visual inspection of the property.

PART B: This section is the most important section of the Application & Appeal Form as it states the legal basis for your application or appeal. This is significant because the legal criteria for granting or denying your request for relief depends upon which statutory basis you select. The legal standard is not uniform for the many available types of applications and appeals. Thus, you must be careful to select the statutory basis which applies to your set of facts and gives your request the best opportunity for success. A brief example of the different types of request for relief is set forth below and is intended to help you understand their distinctions. However, these examples are not exclusive nor are they intended to substitute for the advice of a competent attorney. You may want to consider using the same valuable zoning reference guide used by attorneys, zoning boards, zoning officers and applicants throughout New Jersey entitled "New Jersey Zoning and Land Use Administration" written by William M. Cox. The book is published by Gann Law Books and is available in the reference section of the Ocean County Library.

EXAMPLE #1: N.J.S.A. 40:55D-70 (a.) This provision is known as the "Administrative Officer Error" appeal. For instance, if a use allegedly became nonconforming prior to the preceding year the zoning officer cannot issue a zoning permit confirming the existence of the nonconforming use. The owner of the nonconforming use must appeal the denial under this provision to the Zoning Board of Adjustment.

EXAMPLE #2: N.J.S.A. 40:55D-70(b.) "Interpretation of the Land Use Ordinance". For example, a zoning ordinance may state that a particular land use district permits "manufacturing" and defines that word with some examples of manufacturing uses. However, the applicant intends to operate a manufacturing establishment which is not specifically defined in the ordinance and does not fit easily into any of the provided for examples of "manufacturing". Nonetheless, there is no dispute that the activity constitutes manufacturing. The applicant could (and should) in this case file an application requesting relief in the form of an interpretation of the land use ordinance in order to determine whether the proposed use is permitted in that zoning district.

EXAMPLE #3: N.J.S.A. 40:55D-70(b.) "Special Questions Application". This application typically comes in the form of a question whether a proposed use is similar to or has the same general characteristics of any of the uses specifically permitted in the subject zoning district. This issue may involve an interpretation of the zoning ordinance, but it requires a noticeably more intense level of comparison between the proposed use and the permitted use than does an ordinary interpretation case. For example, a zoning district may specifically permit retail stores, hotels, hair salons, and bakeries, but does not list a bowling alley as a permitted use. The applicant could apply for relief under this section requesting a determination that a bowling alley is characteristically similar to the enumerated permitted uses.

EXAMPLE #4: N.J.S.A. 40:55D-70(c.) (1) "Hardship Variance". This variance may be sought where an applicant can show that strict application of the ordinance, where there are unique and exceptional characteristics of the subject property, would result in undue hardship to the applicant. In Ric-Cic Co. vs. Bassinder, 252 N.J. Super. 334 (App. Div. 1991), the court held that denying setback and off-street parking variances would create hardship where they would make development of applicant's property impossible under the circumstances. The applicant was rebuilding a restaurant on an ocean pier which had no space for parking or for the required setbacks. Note: Personal hardship is not grounds for granting the variance. Nor is a self-created hardship grounds for granting the variance, such as when an applicant constructs a dwelling in ignorance and in violation of the required setbacks. Negligence or flagrant violation of the zoning laws will not be rewarded with a variance. The proper analysis focuses upon the hardship arising out of the conditions peculiar to a specific piece of property.

EXAMPLE #5: N.J.S.A. 40:55D-70(c.) (2) "Substantial Benefit" variance. Undue hardship is not a criteria under this variance. Rather, in addition to other enumerated criteria, the applicant must demonstrate that a purpose of the Municipal Land Use Law would be advanced by a deviation from the zoning ordinance. For example, where a stream crosses a rear yard a (c.) (2) variance may be approved to allow for adjustment of setbacks in order to protect the stream and prevent the "degradation of the environment through improper use of land" (i.e., one of the purposes of the MLUL).

EXAMPLE #6: N.J.S.A. 40:55D-70(d.) (1) "Use Variance." In addition to other criteria, the applicant must demonstrate that there are special reasons to deviate from the zoning ordinance. For example, a marina use might be found suited for waterfront property in a residential zone. Likewise, a private hospital for the emotionally disturbed might be found suited for property in a residential zone. Generally, there may be special reasons for the grant of a (d.) (1) variance where the development advances a purpose of the Municipal Land Use Law or refusal of the variance might impose on the applicant an undue hardship.

EXAMPLE #7: N.J.S.A. 40:55D-70(d.) (2) "Expansion of a Nonconforming Use." A nonconforming use is one which was a conforming use prior to enactment of a zoning ordinance or prior to a change in an existing zoning ordinance. Such a situation arises, for instance, where an auto repair business is conforming under an existing zoning ordinance but a subsequent amendment changes the district from general business to residential. A (d.) (2) variance would be required before the owner can construct additional garage space to accommodate more cars. By way of further example, consider a business which is located in a conforming three-story building but a zoning amendment later limits building height in that zone to two stories. In this case, the owner of the building would require a (d.) (2) variance to construct a fourth floor.

EXAMPLE #8: N.J.S.A. 40:55D-70(d.) (3) A (d.) (3) variance would allow a deviation from the conditions imposed with respect to a conditional use. For example, an apartment complex may be designated as a conditional use in a residential zone upon meeting certain design elements such as off-street parking. A deviation from these design elements requires a (d.) (3) variance.

The Municipal Land Use Law contains other forms of relief and you are encouraged to consider all of the choices available to you.

PART C: This section of the form must be completed if you are seeking one or more of the following in conjunction with a "D" variance: subdivision approval, site plan approval, or conditional use approval. This is known as the ancillary jurisdiction of the Zoning Board of Adjustment because under regular circumstances, in the absence of a request for a "D" variance, the municipal Planning Board would entertain these three types of applications. This is permissive rather than mandatory. In other words, an applicant may decide to file a request for a "D" variance to the Zoning Board of Adjustment and a request for subdivision, site plan and/or conditional use approval to the Planning Board.

PART D:

1. For example, "Seeking a (c.) (2) variance to permit construction of a home with 20' sideyard setbacks where 30' is required".
2. You must specify the municipal ordinance number. A copy of the land use ordinance and design regulations is on file in the Office of the Municipal Clerk. Copies are also sold by the Municipal Clerk's Office for a fee of $50.00.
- 3./4. Applicant controls this information and must provide this information.
5. Generally, the owner of record would be in control of this information. However, some information may be available from municipal files.
- 6./7. This information specifically relates to the legal standard your application must meet.
8. This information is available to the owner of the property and may not be contained in municipal files.
9. The telephone number for the Little Egg Harbor Township Municipal Utilities Authority is 296-1168.
10. Self-explanatory.
11. This information is available from the Tax Collector's Office.

PART E: We appreciate receiving basic contact information pertaining to your professionals to assist us in the processing of your application or appeal.

CERTIFICATIONS: Please note the special signature requirements for corporations and partnerships. Also, it is important for you to provide the Tax Assessor sufficient notice that you will need an appointment to obtain his/her signatures. The Tax Assessor spends a good part of the day in the field doing inspections so s/he may not be available unless you make an appointment.
